XII. Definitions

Affinity marketing is a partnership between a company (supplier) and an organisation (e.g., the ITF) to bring a greater consumer base to their service, product, or opinion.

Brand is the image and perception of the organisation in the eyes of the world.

- Branding is a marketing practice of actively shaping a distinctive brand.
- Brand identity is the collection of elements created by the organisation to portray the right image to its customer and member base.

To build a strong brand identity, the following elements must be in place:

- (1) Mission, what does the organisation stand for?; what is its purpose?;
- (2) Values, what are the beliefs that drive the organisation;
- (3) "Face" of the organisation, the logo is essentially "the face" of the organisation and must be memorable and meaningful;
- (4) Credibility and consistency, building trust among the members and customers by maintaining a stable business strategy and goals;
- (5) Unique positioning, differentiating from competitors; what is the organisation's value proposition?;
- (6) Brand voice, organisation's communication strategy online, on social media, and directly.

Business plan is a document that describes the nature of the business, the sales and marketing strategy, and the financial background, containing a projected profit and loss statement. A typical business plan contains an executive summary, description of the business, description of service/product, market analysis, competitive analysis, operations and management, financial components, and other supporting documents, such as legal documents, supplier contracts, tax returns, and leadership team resumes.

(Corporate) Social Responsibility (CSR) is an evolving business practice that incorporates sustainable development into the organisation's business model. A socially responsible organisation or firm has a positive impact on social, economic, and environmental factors, effecting social change with its business beliefs, practices, and profits. Adopting long-term practices consistent with CSR is a way to bolster the image of an organisation, build a brand, and attract members and customers. The four areas where CSR has been applied are:

- (1) Environmental efforts, reducing the carbon footprint of the organisation;
- (2) Philanthropy, donating funds, products, or services to social causes and nonprofits;
- (3) Ethical labor practices, treating employees and members fairly and ethically, particularly when operating in international locations with labor laws that differ from those in the OECD countries; and
- (4) Volunteering, serving the community and doing good deeds without expecting anything in return, and expressing commitment to specific issues and/or to certain organisations.

Digital marketing is the component of marketing that utilises internet and online based digital technologies, such as apps, YouTube, and websites to promote products and services. Digital marketing campaigns employ combinations of search engine optimisation (SEO), search engine marketing (SEM), content marketing, influencer marketing, content automation, campaign marketing, data-driven marketing, e-commerce marketing, social media marketing, social media optimisation, e-mail direct marketing, display advertising, e-books, and online games.

Fundraising (also known as development) is the process by which nonprofit organisations solicit and gather voluntary financial contributions from individuals, businesses, charitable foundations, or governmental agencies. A successful fundraising strategy consists of building long-term relationships with existing donors to retain them for future development, bringing in foundation support, and attracting new donors. Much more than being about "money", giving to a cause or an organisation helps people follow their own interests, express their values, and advance their own aspirations. Thus, fundraising strategies must also include a reporting component that explains to existing and prospective donors why and how their interests are aligned with those of the organisation.

Sponsorship is a form of affinity marketing that gives certain rights and benefits to the buyer or "sponsor." Benefits to the sponsor include, advertising activated by affiliation with the partner organisation ("sponsee"), and access to its fan and membership base. In exchange, sponsors support the organisation, its events, its activities, or its persons, financially or by providing products or services. Sponsors may use the images and logo of the partner and call themselves an "official sponsor" of the partner's event, venue, or activity. Sponsorship is particularly effective when the sponsor and the partner have similar goals, values, and vision.

XII. Definitions

ITF International Coaches Course

A conference aimed at providing further education and training opportunities in a collegial environment emphasizing the sharing of knowledge and experience amongst coaches and experts in subject areas relevant to ITF coaches.

Coach

The ITF definition of “Instructor” aligns closely with the wider sport definition of “Coach”, rather than the narrower sport term “Instructor”. In Committee deliverables, “Coach” and “Instructor” are used interchangeably, generally using “Coach”.

Coach Developer

Coach developers are experts in learning. They are trained to develop, support and challenge coaches to continue improving their knowledge and skills to provide positive and effective sport experiences for all participants.

Coach Developer Assessor

Coach developer assessors provide the support structure necessary to facilitate ongoing personal development of Coach Developers and serve the ITF by mentoring or assessing Coach Developers in training.

Trainer of Coach Developers

XII. Definitions

Ethics, Etiquette and Protocol are three terms used to refer to rules and norms governing the behaviour of people. The three concepts may appear similar because they all refer to human behaviour. However, they are not the same. It is important to be aware of those differences to avoid confusion and misunderstanding in communications regarding ethics, etiquette and protocol. Hence the following definitions:

- Ethics

The term “ethics” is used to refer to a set of moral principles governing the behaviour of people in life. These principles are used to articulate rules of behaviour that are based on ideas of what is morally good or bad, morally right or wrong. The terms “ethical standards” and “standards of ethical conduct” are commonly used to refer to ethical rules. A code of ethics provides moral guidance to people. It helps people to take actions and make decisions that are morally sound and ethically appropriate.

Examples: being honest in relations; telling the truth; respecting the dignity of persons, avoiding conflict of interest, working conscientiously, being fair, being impartial, keeping promises, taking steps to do no harm or minimize potential harm.

- Etiquette

The term “etiquette” is derived from the French language and is used to refer to the set of conventions, norms, manners, or rules governing social behaviour within a society or among members of a particular group. Based on customs and traditions, it outlines expectations for social behaviour within a society or group, and indicates what is the proper and polite way to behave in that society or group.

Etiquette is not driven by moral principles, values or standards. It is driven by traditions, conventions, or customs. This is why etiquette tends to vary across cultures.

Examples: chewing with your mouth closed; saying “please” and “thank you”; not speaking until the other finishes.

- Protocol

The term “protocol” is used to refer to the code of conduct or behaviour prescribed for members of an institution, government and international officials to demonstrate courtesy and ensure politeness. It is like etiquette, but on a more formal level and in a more limited sphere of interactions (interactions among members of a specific group as opposed to interactions among members of a society in general).

Traditionally, it is defined as the etiquette of diplomacy and affairs of the state. This means that Protocol constitutes the code of behaviour, ceremonial forms, courtesies, and procedures accepted and required for interactions between heads of states, government and/or diplomatic officials. Protocols take on a more serious nature in that they are rules detailing how certain activities should be carried out and how government and international officials must conduct themselves. As with etiquette, protocol establishes the correct, formal and polite behaviour that should be maintained by the above-mentioned officials. However, unlike etiquette, which governs the polite behaviour of society in general, protocol focuses on the behaviour of government and/or diplomatic officials including heads of states.

Applied to Taekwon-Do, and as reflected in the ITF Protocol (2017), the term “protocol” refers to the set of formal rules and procedures adopted by the ITF to demonstrate and ensure courtesy, consideration, respect in relations among the members of the ITF, particularly in relations between juniors and seniors. These rules and procedures are based on the traditions and customs of Taekwon-Do as a martial art and as passed down by its Founder General Choi.

Protocol is not driven by moral principles, values or standards. Like etiquette, it is driven by traditions, conventions, or customs.

Examples: Manner in which ceremonies or meetings are conducted; manner in which respect is demonstrated to a Master or Grand Master.

- Definition Summary

To sum up, ethics has more to do with moral principles and values – it deals with issues related to what is morally right or wrong (ethical behaviour); etiquette has more to do with customs and traditions - it deals with issues related to good manners and politeness in general (social behaviour); and protocol is like etiquette but on a more formal level, prescribing specific rules of behaviour for interactions among members of an organization or institution to demonstrate courtesy and ensure correct and polite behaviour.
